

Cyber-security for Municipalities Topic of eMazzanti Appearance on Bruce Hurwitz Presents

Strengthening and reducing the cost of cyber-security for municipalities to be discussed today with NYC tech entrepreneur, Carl Mazzanti, on popular BlogTalkRadio program

Hoboken, New Jersey -- (Cision) November 3, 2017 — eMazzanti Technologies President and Co-founder, Carl Mazzanti, will be a featured guest on the popular BlogTalkRadio program and podcast, Bruce Hurwitz Presents. The 25-minute interview is scheduled for 5:00 pm (EST) today, Friday, November 3, 2017. Mazzanti's topic will be: "Cyber-security for Municipalities."

The interview with Mazzanti will touch on issues such as, how new technologies affect cyber-security risk, budgetary constraints on mitigating risk and opportunities to decrease costs while strengthening the municipality's cyber-security defenses.

The following statement from Mazzanti gives insight into the direction of the interview:

"Municipalities of all sizes increasingly employ tools such as mobile devices and remote access to improve their organizational efficiency and cost effectiveness of services. However, this also increases their security risks. Hence, cybersecurity ranks at or near the top of local government technology priorities."

"Although municipalities want cutting-edge data security, it must reside within the budgetary constraints they face. They stretch resources to derive measures that are both prudent and necessary to prevent the loss of sensitive data. This includes leveraging cost-effective tools and technology to protect against cyberattack, training staff on information security, and conducting regular security reviews and audits by an independent party."
